"Balanced Diet Reading"

Independence is at the heart of the Common Core Standards. Adolescents must develop a reading habit that increases stamina and joy in reading, while increasing the complexity of the texts they can independently read. We will look at a growing body of research on the need to promote joyous effort in classrooms and discuss practical ideas for creating a sense of urgency, agency, and responsibility in all students. As teachers understand and balance independent reading with book clubs and core text study, all students are on a path to increase the complexity of the texts they can independently read. With increased agency in reading, students respond thoughtfully and analytically to their reading in conferences and in writing. This analytical reading leads students to deeper comprehension and vision for their own writing. We will design effective, incremental instruction along a predictable progression of skills necessary for students to become critical, thoughtful readers. In addition, we will learn about and see first hand the Power of Talk.

Please join us in this amazing opportunity to learn, discuss, and apply all that Penny offers as a leader in literacy.
